African & African American Studies (Major, Double Major, Joint Major, Minor)

We invite students looking for the advantages of being part of a program that combines personal attention with a wide choice of courses in a curriculum that emphasizes an interdisciplinary perspective. A degree in this program can be the starting point for careers in law, medicine, government service, community organizations, and all levels of education.

American Studies (Major, Double Major, Joint Major, Minor) American Studies is an interdisciplinary field of study that offers a broad range of courses. A degree in American Studies can help you prepare for rewarding career paths in academia, social activism, non-profit work, media, law, government, museum management, librarianship, and teaching.

Asian Studies (Major, Double Major, Joint Major, Minor) This is an independent program affiliated with the Department of Transnational Studies; it provides a gateway to interdisciplinary studies with an international focus. A degree in Asian Studies can help you prepare for careers in foreign service, international business, non-governmental service, and so on.

Global Gender Studies (Major, Double Major, Joint Major, Minor) The Global Gender Studies program is founded on a commitment to cutting edge approaches to gender studies and a standard of academic excellence that prepares students for many different career paths.

Latina/Latino Studies (Minor only) The course of study in this program combines its Latino courses with offerings from history, sociology, philosophy, anthropology, literature, and language. Like other programs in this department, a minor in Latina/Latino Studies can be a stepping stone to a wide variety of career paths.

Polish Studies (Minor only) The minor in Polish Studies consists of two tracks: the Culture and Society track, and the Language track. If you have an interest in European Studies then one approach is to begin by doing a minor in this program.
